It's never too soon to start thinking about college. Where will your child go? What kind of extracurricular and community service activities should your child be doing? What should your child be doing today that will help them to get into their school of choice?

To navigate the confusing and often stressful college admissions process, parents from all over the world turn to Barry Liebowitz of International College Counselors in Boca Raton. He and his team of advisors provide unparalleled college admissions counseling services.

Now in its 10th year, International College Counselors has quite the track record. In 2014, 160 students gained admission to 63 different schools, including all eight Ivy League institutions and the best public and private universities across the country.

Liebowitz prides himself on his ability to work with students of all backgrounds to find their best-fit college. "Through personalized one-on-one consulting, I help each student reach his or her individual goals," says Liebowitz.

"I THRIVE ON EXTRACTING WHAT MAKES THEM SPECIAL, BUILDING UPON IT, HIGHLIGHTING AND LEVERAGING IT TO GET THE STUDENT INTO THE SCHOOL OF HIS OR HER CHOICE."

Liebowitz has worked with student athletes, fine art majors, those bound for Ivy League universities, international students, first-generation college students and those with special needs.

"Each student is unique. I thrive on extracting what makes them special, building upon it, highlighting and leveraging it to get the student into the school of his or her choice," says Liebowitz. "Starting early lets you plan the best high school curriculum, extracurricular activities, and summer opportunities, while also allowing the student ample time to ask themselves what they are looking for in a college experience."

As competition continues to grow for spots at universities nationwide, it is imperative for students to have a strong support system, game plan and positive attitude.

"Our one-on-one approach gives us the insight needed to find the best possible schools for our students and families, minimizing their stress while maximizing their opportunities."
